Treatment Of Germany Seen As Foremost Item On Moscow Agenda

BERLIN PEACE THREAT

Washington Concerned By Stalin's Post-War Plans Regarding Berlin

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23—Strong diplomatic belief prevailed in Washington today that Secretary of State Cordell Hull intends, in the current Moscow talks, to try to convince the Russians that the complete disarmament of Germany after the war is essential to world peace.

The treatment to be accorded a defeated Germany is known to be one of the foremost items of discussion on the agenda of the Moscow conference.

It is considered likely in Washington that it may be the first political problem taken up by the American, British and Soviet foreign ministers following disposal of the second front issue.

This government considers a full understanding with Russia concerning the treatment of Germany to be a matter of the utmost importance.

It is felt the future political freedom of Eastern Europe is bound up with this question. If Germany is disarmed and kept disarmed after the war, official Washington thinks there will be no need for Russia to dominate neighboring states for security reasons.

Rights Forfeited

Washington's official attitude is that Germany, by starting two world wars, has forfeited for a long time the right to possess the weapons of modern warfare. Hull is expected to emphasize this point to Soviet Foreign Commissar Molotov.

He also is expected to urge the necessity of maintaining surveillance over Germany until such time as the German people "demonstrate their willingness and ability to live at peace with other nations."

American Concern

American officials have been deeply concerned over Russia's postwar intentions in respect to Germany. Moscow has never joined the United States and Great Britain in advocating the unconditional surrender and complete disarmament of Germany.

Union Leaders Called To Explain Failure To Get Men Back In Pits

By International News Service
Alabama representatives of 18,000 striking members of the United Mine Workers of America appeared before the War Labor Board in Washington Saturday to explain the "wildcat" strike and their failure to get the men to return to the pits.

The call for William Mitch, president of the Alabama UMWA district, and John Henratty, International UMWA representative for Alabama, came at a time when the walkout had spread to five other states.

Between four and six thousand miners in addition to those idle in Alabama coal districts were involved in the walkouts in Ohio, Illinois, Kentucky, Arkansas and Indiana.

Nearly one thousand men walked out Friday in Ohio, latest state to be affected by the strikes which began October 14 when the last of the government controlled mines were turned back to their owners for operation. The miners contend that they cannot work when there is no contract between the UMWA and the operators.

The Ohio mine affected was the Powhatan mine near Martins Ferry, largest digging in the state. Two thousand miners were out in four pits at West Frankfort, Ill., and there were predictions that the walkout would close "all mines in the state in three days."

The prediction was made by Theodore Mitchell, UMWA board member.

Failure of the War Labor Board to approve a proposed contract between Illinois UMWA miners and their operators was blamed for the walkouts in that state.

The strikes in Alabama have seriously hampered war production as several steel companies were forced by dwindling coal stockpiles to bank blast and open hearth furnaces. In all 60 shafts in the state were closed.

John L. Lewis, president of the UMWA, ordered the miners to return to their jobs shortly after the Alabama strikes began a week ago Thursday, but so far the miners have ignored his order. Likewise an order from the WLB to return to work was ignored.

JAP SUBMARINES NOW OPERATING IN WOLF PACKS

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 23—Large forces of Japanese submarines, operating in "wolf packs," are launching bold attacks against American shipping plying between the Pacific coast and the Hawaiian Islands, the Los Angeles Examiner reported today.

News of the Jap undersea offensive, first since the early days of the war, was brought into west coast ports by crew members and officers of American merchant ships, the newspaper said.

During the first months of the war, however, Jap subs operated in single units. New tactics of the enemy submarines indicated that they are copying Nazi U-boat "wolf pack" methods.

Officers from an American tanker reported that their vessel, employing desperate evasive tactics, managed to escape torpedoes fired almost simultaneously from enemy submarines.

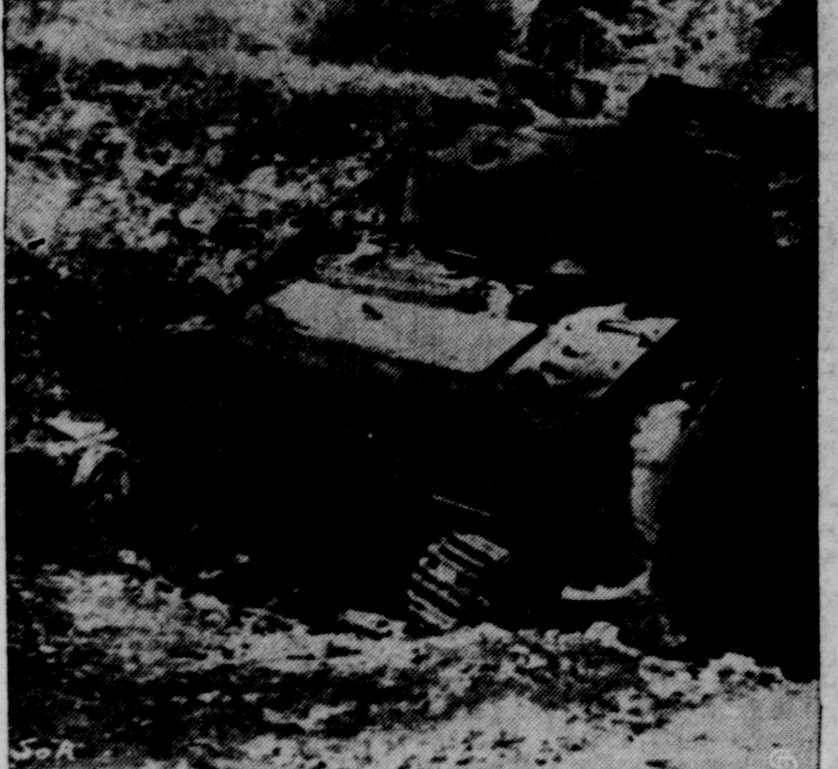

The captain of a newly arrived freighter also reported narrow brushes with Japanese subs when enroute from Honolulu.

The Navy department in Washington said that it was unable to either confirm or deny reports of the renewed submarine warfare.

LOYD GEORGE WEDS

LONDON, Oct. 23—David Lloyd George, prime minister of Great Britain in the last war, staged another of his surprises today—but it was romantic rather than political. The 80-year-old, white-haired Welsh statesman married Miss Frances L. Stevenson, his private secretary since 1913.

Junior Fair Leaders Say Celebration To Be Financial Success

Junior Fair officials, conducting the event on a much larger scale than a year ago, expressed confidence Saturday that the celebration will be a financial success, if weather late Saturday afternoon and evening remains favorable.

Robert G. Colville, treasurer of the Pickaway County Agricultural Society, said Saturday that the society's share of receipts from rides brought here by the A. W. Gooding Co., and from concessions scattered through the business district will go a long way toward financing the undertaking.

SWEET SPREADS FROZEN; RATION STARTS OCT. 31

Dwindling stocks of jams, jellies, preserves and fruit spreads were frozen on grocers' shelves today until rationing of the products starts October 31.

The action, effective at 12:01 a. m. today, was taken by the OPA at the direction of the War Foods Administration to build up the supplies and to insure equitable distribution. Citrus marmalades are excluded.

OPA said that supplies have been drained to a low level in recent weeks and the freeze order was necessary to "prevent their complete disappearance from the retail market."

Consumers may use blue stamps X, Y and Z from war Ration Book Two from October 31 through November 20 in purchasing jams, jellies, preserves and fruit spreads when actual rationing of the products begins.

Green stamps A, B and C from war Ration Book Four will be used for the four spreads from November 1 through December 20.

OPA said that during the nine-day freeze the retail trade will move stocks in from the new pack of fruit spreads which is now being canned and bottled so that there will be supplies on hand when rationing purchases start.

FAST PROGRESS BEING SCORED BY PIPELINERS

Pipelineers are making great progress across Pickaway county with welders already proceeding past Pherson and ditchers being north of Circleville, several miles ahead of the welding outfit.

C. S. Foreman Co. spokesman said Saturday that weather has been perfect for progress, and that if bad weather holds off for a while longer the central Ohio phase of the work will be ended ahead of schedule.

The Foreman Co., which has set up offices in the National Guard armory, East Franklin street, is building the 20-inch gasoline pipeline from the Indiana line to the eastern Fairfield county line. Other contractors on from that point to the east.

MOSCOW PARLEY CONTINUES ITS MILITARY TENOR

MOSCOW, Oct. 23—The conference of foreign ministers of the United States, Britain and Russia retained its military tenor today with officers of the armed forces continuing to sit at the conference table with the principals.

Although there still was nothing official in the way of information as to what is transpiring some quarters believed that the conferees were planning combined military and political moves to sap the Nazi hold on the satellite nations of Europe.

Attending the latest secret session at the Spiridonovka palace with the military delegates of United States Secretary of State Cordell Hull and British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden were the military chiefs of Russia. Among them was Marshal Klementi Voroshilov and Maj. Gen. S. A. Grizlov, representing the general staff of the Red army. Also present were members of Premier Joseph Stalin's war council.

Informed quarters pointed out meanwhile that Eden's visit to Marshal Stalin in the Kremlin was not to be interpreted to indicate that the premier was in any way intervening in the talks. Secretary Hull also will visit Stalin before the conclusion of the conference.

Solons After Refusing To Hoist Income Tax Turn To Corporations

BOOST SEEN AS LIKELY

Indications, However, Point To Moderate Increase In Levy

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23—The house ways and means committee, having voted two-to-one against any further increase in individual income taxes, reconvened today to consider a similar proposal to leave corporate income taxes at existing levels.

At the same time, the committee again summoned Colin F. Stamm, who heads its staff of experts, to obtain his views on the possibility of strengthening the excess profits levy, particularly as it applies to non-war corporate income.

Indications were that corporations will not fare as well at the hands of the committee as did individual income taxpayers yesterday, although there is little sentiment to increase the corporate burden by more than a moderate amount.

The committee's decision against any further increase in personal income tax rates was taken by a 16-to-8 vote. It translated into specific action a revolt that was spawned October 4, when the administration proposed that an additional 10 billion, 500 million dollars be raised.

Program Rejected

BRITISH CREDIT YANK LEADERS WITH VICTORY

ALGIERS, Oct. 23—A British spokesman told a news conference today that the gallantry and determination of "hard-boiled" American officers saved the situation at Salerno four days after the initial landing when the Germans unleashed a savage counter-attack.

Hoping to throw the American troops back into the sea the Germans gathered a concentration of panzers along the Sele river and hurled themselves with might and main against the Yanks positions. According to the official spokesman, the American officers grimly stood their ground and kept the situation in hand. In the end the Germans broke off their attack at the critical moment when "just one more hard punch" might have pierced our line guarding the beachhead and therewith would have brought an avalanche of panzers disastrously into the landing area.

The Briton also praised American leadership for "quickly sizing up and taking advantage" of the situation on September 13 and 14, by going aggressively into the Germans and therewith keeping the initiative in the critical Salerno-Naples battling.

He revealed that two parachute units were landed—one on the Sele and another on the Avellino—which helped to confuse the enemy and therewith hasten his retreat inland. Only 150 failed to return to our lines, he added.

Unidentified Plane Shoots Down Swedish Transport and 13 Die

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 23—Air traffic between England and Sweden was suspended today following an attack on a Swedish transport plane which crashed with the loss of 13 lives after it was shot down by an unidentified military plane.

The plane crashed in flames near Haaloe, 55 miles north of Gothenburg, off the Swedish coast last night.

Just before the crash the plane's radio operator sent a message stating:

"Forced to make emergency landing. Been shot down."

The dead, as yet unidentified, were reported to include an American, an Englishman and six Russians. Two persons, one a passenger and one member of the crew, were rescued. The total aboard at the time of the crash was 15, eleven passengers and four crew members.

The crew member saved was a mechanic named Grupp who declared an unidentified military plane fired on the craft and set it afire. He told his story to a correspondent of the newspaper Dagens Nyheter.

"Three bursts were fired," he said. "One engine stopped and more bursts followed for 10 minutes. Then the second engine stopped. The wings caught fire and the pilot gave an order to prepare for an emergency landing. But with both engines dead the plane was unmanageable, hit a rock and broke in two."

"As I got away I saw it blazing."

The shooting began at approximately 10:35 p. m.

In a broadcast by the Swedish home radio reported by U. S. government monitors the crew member saved was identified as "Engineer Geroth." The passenger was said to be a seaman named Olson. Geroth suffered only slight injuries, it was said.

The Russians were said to have been women and children, probably relatives of members of the Russian legation in Stockholm. The Swedish citizens were identified as a Capt. Moeller and Miss Boerckman.

Complete information on passengers was lacking because the list of persons was aboard the burned plane and "it has been impossible yet to communicate with the office in London," said the broadcast.

The name of the plane was given as the "Gripen."

LONDON, Oct. 23—The sole American passenger aboard the Swedish transport plane in which 13 persons died when the craft was shot down off the coast of Sweden was identified today as Dr. T. C. Hume, a clergyman believed enroute to Sweden to do relief work.

Dr. Hume, it was understood, came from Los Angeles where he was pastor of the Claremont Congregational church.

He was an official representative of the Federated Council of Churches and engaged in preliminary planning of relief and reconstruction work in post-war Europe.

90 PLANES JOIN IN SEARCH FOR LOST BOMBER

OTTAWA, Can., Oct. 23—Ninety British, Canadian and United States army planes resumed an intensified search today for an RCAF Liberator bomber, which has been missing in the Gulf of St. Lawrence area since Tuesday with 24 men on board.

Hampered by heavy fog and bad weather in the early phases of the search, air patrols which have been fanning out over a wide area also were forced to contend with the fact that the giant four-motored ship was camouflaged perfectly to blend with either woodland or water.

All men aboard the missing ship were members of the Canadian Aid Force. Four were junior officers. All had come from Canadian Atlantic air stations, some to attend a technical conference in Montreal and others on leave.

Today, the whole force of 90 Canadian Air Force, United States Army and Royal Air Force Command aircraft took up the task again.

Planes Roar To Support Of Aussies Fighting Near Finschhafen

By International News Service
A massive blow to disrupt German arms production was struck during the night, the British air ministry said today in announcing that "a very heavy attack" was made on the engineering and armament center of Kassel.

The raid against the industrial center and rail terminal on the Fulda river resulted in the loss of 44 RAF bombers. This is the largest number of bombers lost by the British in recent weeks but, in view of the fact that the objective always has been very heavily guarded, it was not considered surprising.

The authoritative British Press Association referred to it as an "obliteration" attack. The phrase "very heavy" has frequently been used by the air ministry to indicate concentrated saturation assaults in which hundreds of tons of blockbusters are poured on the target in a brief interval.

Vital Center

Kassel—with industries such as engine, aircraft and munitions plants as well as iron foundries—underwent a pummeling by 1,500 tons of explosives last October 2.

While the RAF heavy bombers soared against the target east of the Ruhr a few bombs were dropped in the London area by German raiders who encountered the heaviest anti-aircraft barrage sent up in weeks.

Far in the Southwest Pacific, a record raid was carried out by other Allied airmen. This time, the Japs were on the receiving end when 221 tons of high explosives rained down on the Sattelberg Waroe area, north of Finschhafen in New Guinea. It was the heaviest air assault ever unleashed in this area and served as support for Australian ground forces who were hard-pressed by reinforced enemy troops in a counteroffensive north of the vital Finschhafen supply port and airbase.

Three assaults were carried out against Kara airdrome on Bougainville, and four attacks were made by Allied planes on waterfront installations on Kakasa Island in Choiseul bay. Both operations were part of an intensified battering being dealt to Solomon island positions of the Japs.

RAILROADERS MEET TO CAST VOTE ON STRIKE

CHICAGO, Oct. 23—Leaders of the "Big Five" operating railroad brotherhoods meet today to vote "yes" or "no" on a resolution recommending a strike among the 350,000 workers in the five unions.

Four hundred leaders of the five brotherhoods, in separate sessions Friday, decided to reject a four cents an hour wage increase recommended October 16 by Fred M. Vinson, director of the Office of Economic Stabilization.

The operating unions were incensed at the four cent increase recommendation. It was far under the minimum raise of $3 a day they had asked.

Non-operating unions, who have 1,100,000 railroad workers, have already determined to hold a strike vote if such a decision is reached by the operating brotherhoods. The non-operating groups want a twenty-cent an hour increase.

Tenor of today's meeting in Morrison hotel was indicated by A. F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, who declared:

"Labor's no strike pledge is becoming more and more untenable."

Police Official Fails To Identify Fingerprint At Murder Trial

NASSAU, Bahamas, Oct. 23—Cross-examination continued today of Maj. Herbert Pemberton, high ranking Nassau police official who failed to identify a fingerprint on which the crown partly bases its murder case against Count Alfred De Marigny.

Defense Attorney Godfrey Higgs further grilled Pemberton regarding the manner in which the Bahamas police conducted the investigation into the torch-bluegone murder of Sir Harry Oakes, multi-millionaire father-in-law of the accused.

Most startling development of the day was provided by Pemberton when a screen was brought before him. The screen, which the prosecution contends bears De Marigny's fingerprint and was taken from the murder room, was minutely examined under a magnifying glass by the police officer.

Complete information on passengers was lacking because the list of persons was aboard the burned plane and "it has been impossible yet to communicate with the office in London," said the broadcast.

The name of the plane was given as the "Gripen."

LONDON, Oct. 23—The sole American passenger aboard the Swedish transport plane in which 13 persons died when the craft was shot down off the coast of Sweden was identified today as Dr. T. C. Hume, a clergyman believed enroute to Sweden to do relief work.

Dr. Hume, it was understood, came from Los Angeles where he was pastor of the Claremont Congregational church.

He was an official representative of the Federated Council of Churches and engaged in preliminary planning of relief and reconstruction work in post-war Europe.

90 PLANES JOIN IN SEARCH FOR LOST BOMBER

OTTAWA, Can., Oct. 23—Ninety British, Canadian and United States army planes resumed an intensified search today for an RCAF Liberator bomber, which has been missing in the Gulf of St. Lawrence area since Tuesday with 24 men on board.

Hampered by heavy fog and bad weather in the early phases of the search, air patrols which have been fanning out over a wide area also were forced to contend with the fact that the giant four-motored ship was camouflaged perfectly to blend with either woodland or water.

All men aboard the missing ship were members of the Canadian Air Force. Four were junior officers. All had come from Canadian Atlantic air stations, some to attend a technical conference in Montreal and others on leave.

Today, the whole force of 90 Canadian Air Force, United States Army and Royal Air Force Command aircraft took up the task again.

KASSEL QUAKES UNDER MASSIVE BRITISH RAID

RAF Loses 44 Bombers In Attack On Munitions Center Of Reich

JAPS FEEL AIR MIGHT

Planes Roar To Support Of Aussies Fighting Near Finschhafen

By International News Service
A massive blow to disrupt German arms production was struck during the night, the British air ministry said today in announcing that "a very heavy attack" was made on the engineering and armament center of Kassel.

The raid against the industrial center and rail terminal on the Fulda river resulted in the loss of 44 RAF planes. This is the largest number of bombers lost by the British in recent weeks but, in view of the fact that the objective always has been very heavily guarded, it was not considered surprising.

The authoritative British Press Association referred to it as an "obliteration" attack. The phrase "very heavy" has frequently been used by the air ministry to indicate concentrated saturation assaults in which hundreds of tons of blockbusters are poured on the target in a brief interval.

Vital Center

Kassel—with industries such as engine, aircraft and munitions plants as well as iron foundries—underwent a pummeling by 1,500 tons of explosives last October 2.

While the RAF heavy bombers soared against the target east of the Ruhr a few bombs were dropped in the London area by German raiders who encountered the heaviest anti-aircraft barrage sent up in weeks.

Far in the Southwest Pacific, a record raid was carried out by other Allied airmen. This time, the Japs were on the receiving end when 221 tons of high explosives rained down on the Sattelberg Warcoe area, north of Finschhafen in New Guinea. It was the heaviest air assault ever unleashed in this area and served as support for Australian ground forces who were hard-pressed by reinforced enemy troops in a counteroffensive north of the vital Finschhafen supply port and airbase.

Three assaults were carried out against Kara airdrome on Bougainville, and four attacks were made by Allied planes on water-front installations on Kakasa Island in Choiseul bay. Both operations were part of an intensified battering being dealt to Solomon Island positions of the Japs.

RAILROADERS MEET TO CAST VOTE ON STRIKE

CHICAGO, Oct. 23—Leaders of the "Big Five" operating railroad brotherhoods meet today to vote "yes" or "no" on a resolution recommending a strike among the 350,000 workers in the five unions. Four hundred leaders of the five brotherhoods, in separate sessions Friday, decided to reject a four cents an hour wage increase recommended October 16 by Fred M. Vinson, director of the Office of Economic Stabilization.

The operating unions were incensed at the four cent increase recommendation. It was far under the minimum raise of $3 a day they had asked.

Non-operating unions, who have 1,100,000 railroad workers, have already determined to hold a strike vote if such a decision is reached by the operating brotherhoods.

The non-operating groups want a twenty-cent an hour increase. Tenor of today's meeting in Morrison hotel was indicated by A. F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, who declared:

"Labor's no strike pledge is becoming more and more untenable."

COUNT SCORES AGAINST CROWN

Police Official Fails To Identify Fingerprint At Murder Trial

NASSAU, Bahamas, Oct. 23—Cross-examination continued today of Maj. Herbert Pemberton, high ranking Nassau police official who failed to identify a fingerprint on which the crown partly bases its murder case against Count Alfred De Marigny.

Defense Attorney Godfrey Higgs further grilled Pemberton regarding the manner in which the Bahamas police conducted the investigation into the torch-blighted murder of Sir Harry Oakes, multimillionaire father-in-law of the accused.

Most startling development of the day was provided by Pemberton when a screen was brought before him. The screen, which the prosecution contends bears De Marigny's fingerprint and was taken from the murder room, was minutely examined under a magnifying glass by the police officer. "I can see part of a fingerprint, but not enough for identification," (Continued on Page Two)

KISSES FROM UNDERGROUND

THE ways of underground movements are queer. Here, in this free and lovely land, there are unpleasant and dangerous undercurrents trying to serve our enemies. They break the surface of the stream with efforts to arouse anger against our government's administration of the war; with efforts to divide us from our Allies, Britain and Russia; with murmurs about the instability of China.

Criticism of governments, national or local, by friendly comrade or foreign stranger, is the breath of life to democracies. Soldier criticism, the saying goes, can be summed up in one word—"Everything." So ordinary knock-knocks are as nothing to the American. But when they seek to separate fighting allies, they must be taken seriously, not in what they say, but in the fact that they are being said.

Not so serious is the form in which anti-Nazi Germans are expressing approval of Americans. The women are being reproached in public prints for waving at war prisoners. That, it seems, is bad enough. It is worse if a woman throws kisses.

But if it's disagreeable to know about the subversive movements under our own surface, it is certainly pleasant to know that there are enough German women of the anti-Nazi underground approving our soldiers to merit a public rebuke from German newspapers.

CORPSE SHORTAGE

SHORTAGES are expected these days, but one particular shortage, recently reported, could hardly have been looked for. This is a lack of stage corpses.

The play, "Arsenic and Old Lace," frequently performed by professional and amateur groups, calls at one point for a display of 12 male corpses, the victims of the wholesale murders with which the play deals. Male actors are at a premium nowadays, their services being required elsewhere. The director, therefore, had to ignore the stage directions and the demands of the more bloodthirsty of his audience, and display just one corpse.

This is a sign of the times. Male actors are scarce—and getting scarcer.

SUSPICION

THE Japanese sometimes tell the truth. A piece of propaganda sent to China says, "Japan is the one nation about which China need have no suspicion."

This is correct. Suspicion implies at least a lingering possibility that the suspected person or country may after all be innocent. No person over two years old would dream of entertaining this sort of suspicion about Japan.

'ROUND CIRCLEVILLE.... Hour by Hour

Pages From the Diary of An Antiquated Reporter:

Up still tired after a jaunt into Indiana to attend the funeral of my brother. Met there in the old home town scores of men I had not seen in a quarter of a century. Many with whom I played as a kid are long dead, others grandfathers. This is my third trip back since leaving to labor in other parts, all on missions of sorrow.

Strange how little the business district of a city changes. Most of the buildings were familiar to me as were the names of the business owners they bear. But the residential district is different. I could be lost on the West Side, and the university has changed much. Looked over the two homes the family once maintained, but they made little impression. Had no desire to enter them.

All the way back to Indiana and all the way back did vow that this, my first trip by bus, would be my last. Could get no plane reservations or assurance of riding space on a train, so decided to go by the big autos. Terrible.

Noted that the women travel more than men, the ratio about eight to two. And their conversation, which I could not help overhearing, dealt with either conventions or shopping. Hardly essential travel.

Decided that our farmers hereabouts must be lucky, for did see thousands of acres of corn yet uncut, largely in the Hoosier state. Saw much soybean threshing in progress, and only a small percentage of the cattle, sheep, hogs one sees hereabouts.

Received a letter from Abner Griffey inviting me "Down Under" on a fishing trip and telling about a jaunt he and some of his fellow fighters took. Landed some fish, too, and said the week-end spent on a little island somewhere in the Pacific was the most enjoyable he has had so far in that region. He soon did attend the Rotarian session and was much impressed by the 4-H club members and their program. Those kids really do worthwhile things, learning not only how to work, but how to play as well.

Strolled through the downtown district and was not much impressed by the midget Pumpkin Show concessions, but the exhibits are really worth while. And it is worth while to encourage our farm boys and girls in the work they are undertaking. Everyone misses the big show, and when the war is over it is likely that the first event will be the largest of all history.

Chatted with Herman Hill and Eldred Cayce, both of whom are leaving the village. They will be greatly missed, for both have been extremely active in civic affairs, shouldering heavy burdens in the common interest and doing fine jobs. Good luck to both of them in their new fields.

The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

BY DREW PEARSON

REAL EFFORT TO COOPERATE

WASHINGTON—The diplomatic grapevine reports that inter-Allied relations with Russia are going pretty well now. This is certainly true on the surface, and while some irritations have occurred below the surface, both sides have shown a real tendency to try to get along.

Most serious sub-surface irritation was over the Mediterranean Council, through which Russia, the United States and Britain were to confer regarding Italy, North Africa and the Balkans.

The Russians, snubbed earlier in the Summer regarding preliminary Italian armistice terms, took the Mediterranean Council seriously and appointed as their representative Andrei Vishinski, the famous prosecutor in the Russian purge trials. This was the equivalent of sending the most outstanding member of the U. S. Supreme Court or the leading lawyer of England.

Vishinski is a man of national stature, capable of making Mediterranean decisions without consulting Moscow. But to represent the United States on the Mediterranean Council, Secretary Hull sent Ed Wilson, U. S. ambassador to Panama. Wilson is a thorough-going, competent diplomat who can handle any routine job and handle it well. But almost no one outside diplomacy or Panama has heard of him. He has no national stature and he cannot act on his own.

Immediately it developed that Wilson was to act as a glorified messenger and report everything back to Washington. The British representative was to do the same. In other words, Churchill and Roosevelt were to make the decisions, and the much publicized Mediterranean Council was to be a mere reporting agency.

This immediately roused Russian wrath. They had welcomed the Council, appointed a top man. So for a moment they considered withdrawing. However, for the sake of Allied harmony, they stayed on and are giving the Mediterranean Council a trial.

POOR "PA" WATSON

Toughest job White House secretary Maj. Gen. Edwin ("Pa") Watson of the White House secretariat has to tackle each day is keeping the President's appointment schedule on time.

Frequently FDR will sit talking to an old friend for 15 or 20 minutes over the allotted time, and that snarls the White House schedule for the rest of the day.

This is hard on the general's nervous system, especially when bigwigs from the War or Navy departments are waiting to discuss military matters. On such occasions Watson is not above barging in and breaking up the conference.

The other day when the President's old friend, Gov. Bob Kerr of Oklahoma, was over-staying his time—through no fault of his own—Watson walked in and began to parade nervously about the room.

"Well, here's the undertaker, Mr. President," grinned Kerr, catching the hint. "If one of your callers gets so he doesn't move, 'Pa' will move him."

Roosevelt laughingly motioned Watson to a chair.

"Sit down and talk to us for awhile,"

LAFF-A-DAY

DIET AND HEALTH

Bachelor Longevity Vs. That of Husband

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

I HAVE THE greatest respect for the statisticians of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

but it does seem to me that at last they have gone too far and are thrusting rude hands into one of the most sacred traditions of the American scene.

They have come out with a bulletin in which they state seriously that "the bachelor runs a risk which only marriage can overcome for at every age, according to statisticians, the single man's mortality is higher than that of his married brother. And the difference is even greater when his mortality is compared to that of the widower."

Gentlemen, lay aside your pencils, adding machines and long columns of figures and allow me to make you acquainted with an aphorism that is tried and true:

"A married man does not live longer than a bachelor. It only seems longer."

Inadequate Explanation
I do not know where or when this observation originated, although I have consulted the various books of synonyms in my library—Stevenson's, Bartlett's and the Oxford. I will turn the question over to my friend, Mr. Henry Haskell, Editor of the Kansas City Star, who knows everything, or if he doesn't, soon finds out.

The explanation which the Metropolitan statisticians adduce seems to me weak and inadequate. The conclusions are based on the general population of the state of New York, 1939-1941, and it is said that the marked advantage of married men over bachelors persists through life, but is greatest at the ages of 30 to 44 years—the period when families are being raised. At these ages the death rates among married men are just about half those for the single.

The explanations made are that "unmarried men are more apt to take greater chances with their health and are less likely to be adequately cared for in case of illness. Marriage is a stabilizing influence in the life and health of the individual."

These seem to me extremely superficial, not to say sophomoric, conclusions. The idea that the bachelor is not cared for in case of illness shows plain lack of the facts of life. What happens to the married man when he comes home sick? Why, he is told that he was warned not to go out without his rubbers, and that there are some cold tablets on the upper shelf of the bathroom closet if Mabel didn't eat them all, and please not to complain about how he feels any more because Mr. Anthony's program is coming on the radio in five minutes.

Now contrast the bachelor. He comes home and the landlady can tell by looking at him that he is sick. He doesn't have to tell her, she knows instinctively. She takes him up and puts him to bed, and she puts a hot flannel saturated with hartshorn liniment on his chest and gets a steam kettle and gives him something to open him up, and some pills that she has been keeping; on hand for just such an emergency.

No, the statisticians will have to think up some better reason why bachelors do not live longer than married men. If they do.

If they do! My idea is that they don't die at all. They just change into something else. Artemus Ward said: "The happy married man dies in good style at home. The old bachelor doesn't die at all. He sort of rots away, like a pollywog's tail."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
R. K.: What causes the common pinworm? Are they due to improper diet? Have been told to use salt enema. Is this harmful to children?

Answer: Pinworms are usually due to eating fruit and vegetables upon which flies have deposited the eggs. Salt enemas will not do any harm or any good. The best drug to use is gentian violet tablets, but everybody in the family should take the treatment.

M. W.: I have given blood three times to the blood bank and now they tell me I have a systolic heart murmur. Is there any harm in giving again with this condition?

Answer: Depletion of blood itself causes a systolic heart murmur. I would wait until later and see if you don't have a chance to build up, then the murmur may disappear.

Answer: Pinworms are usually due to eating fruit and vegetables upon which flies have deposited the eggs. Salt enemas will not do any harm or any good. The best drug to use is gentian violet tablets, but everybody in the family should take the treatment.

M. W.: I have given blood three times to the blood bank and now they tell me I have a systolic heart murmur. Is there any harm in giving again with this condition?

Answer: Depletion of blood itself causes a systolic heart murmur. I would wait until later and see if you don't have a chance to build up, then the murmur may disappear.

CHAPTER FORTY-FOUR

FOR NEARLY a week after Ruth Moorehouse had had her little weep over war and all that it meant, as she expressed it to Adam, Brenda and Jack, there was an almost peace-time atmosphere about Linville. It was almost as though the war were over, and the town back in its old easy-going rut. Adam found it extremely pleasant—having things like that.

He hummed a popular love song as he packed a suitcase with the things he would need for the dress rehearsal of Peter Platt's play. Sport clothes for Act One, his tuxedo and accessories for Act Two, and a light overcoat for Act Three. He was to wear the business suit he now had on in the last act of the play—the act in which he was to elope with Susan, alias Lila. And for the first time since consenting to take part in the play, he felt a sense of excitement, the sort of excitement he felt when he was younger and playing leads in the home talent plays. He knew he was no actor in the professional sense of the word, but he had in the old days enjoyed playing amateur roles. It gave him a sort of outlet, proved to be a means whereby he could express himself, just as some folks found such an outlet in painting, writing or playing the piano or the harmonica.

Still he would be glad when the play was over, when the proceeds were ready to be given to the USO, and he could give all his attention to the factory and his everyday life. Then he smiled somewhat crookedly as the thought came to him that he would also no longer have a very good excuse for not accepting invitations for dinners and bridge parties. Rehearsals had helped—not that he didn't like going to dinners and bridge; he did like doing so. But some of the things Brenda Leigh had said to him had struck home—had made him feel that maybe he was being used by local husbands—made him feel that maybe Brenda was right when she said that husbands found it easy to get out of engagements simply by calling on him. Well, no matter what, from now on he was going to cut down on that part of his life—accept only the invitations he really wanted to accept, and not accept them just because he hated to let down a hostess. There was going to be more time there now for attending to his business, and—and maybe seeing more of Brenda alone.

The thought of Brenda—alone—just the two of them together—did things to him. And he was a little startled to realize the fact. His heart seemed to quicken its beats a little, and a strange new feeling of excitement got hold of him—and not the sort of excitement he had felt a moment before in regard to the play. It was a different sort—the sort one experienced, he rather imagined, when anticipating meeting someone very dear. "Adam North," he told himself, "you're acting and thinking like a callow high school kid. What's come over you?" He smiled to himself, closed the suitcase and thought, "Whatever it is, I like it."

And in this somewhat exalted frame of mind he went out and got into his car. He was to pick up Susan Potter, since she, too, had a suitcase, and Bill was not at home with their own car. But much as he liked being with Susan, he wished that it were Brenda he was going to call for. There were a lot of things he wanted to talk over with Brenda—things that had to do with careers and marriage, and he particularly wanted to discuss with her the matter of career women combining their careers with marriage and children.

"I'm mad," said Susan, when she was sitting beside him, "good and mad."

"That's no state to be in when you're going to a dress rehearsal," said Adam.

"I don't care. I'm mad nevertheless."

"Want to talk about it?"

Silence, and then, "Yes, I do want to talk about it," said Susan. "It's that Carter woman again."

"I thought that was over, that the deal was off."

"So I did."

"Didn't you tell me that Bill had decided to build his mill bungalow out on that old Johnson farm?"

"I did, and he said just that," said Susan. "But he's having a time getting a clear deed. And today Alicia Carter telephoned him once more. She wanted to see him tonight, he told me. Then he said that it was the last chance he was taking."

Hints on Etiquette

Don't marry a soldier or sailor you have just met just because he begs you to because he is lonesome and upset. Think of your own people; think of his. Think what it will mean when he comes back—a practical stranger to you—and don't do it. Among other things, it's not the sporting thing to do.

KISSES FROM UNDERGROUND

THE ways of underground movements are queer. Here, in this free and lovely land, there are unpleasant and dangerous undercurrents trying to serve our enemies. They break the surface of the stream with efforts to arouse anger against our government's administration of the war; with efforts to divide us from our Allies, Britain and Russia; with murmurs about the instability of China.

Criticism of governments, national or local, by friendly comrade or foreign stranger, is the breath of life to democracies. Soldier criticism, the saying goes, can be summed up in one word—"Everything." So ordinary knock-knocks are as nothing to the American. But when they seek to separate fighting allies, they must be taken seriously, not in what they say, but in the fact that they are being said.

Not so serious is the form in which anti-Nazi Germans are expressing approval of Americans. The women are being reproached in public prints for waving at war prisoners. That, it seems, is bad enough. It is worse if a woman throws kisses.

But if it's disagreeable to know about the subversive movements under our own surface, it is certainly pleasant to know that there are enough German women of the anti-Nazi underground approving our soldiers to merit a public rebuke from German newspapers.

CORPSE SHORTAGE

SHORTAGES are expected these days, but one particular shortage, recently reported, could hardly have been looked for. This is a lack of stage corpses.

The play, "Arsenic and Old Lace," frequently performed by professional and amateur groups, calls at one point for a display of 12 male corpses, the victims of the wholesale murders with which the play deals. Male actors are at a premium nowadays, their services being required elsewhere. The director, therefore, had to ignore the stage directions and the demands of the more bloodthirsty of his audience, and display just one corpse.

This is a sign of the times. Male actors are scarce—and getting scarcer.

SUSPICION

THE Japanese sometimes tell the truth. A piece of propaganda sent to China says, "Japan is the one nation about which China need have no suspicion."

This is correct. Suspicion implies at least a lingering possibility that the suspected person or country may after all be innocent. No person over two years old would dream of entertaining this sort of suspicion about Japan.

'ROUND CIRCLEVILLE.... Hour by Hour

Pages From the Diary of An Antiquated Reporter:

Up still tired after a jaunt into Indiana to attend the funeral of my brother. Met there in the old home town scores of men I had not seen in a quarter of a century. Many with whom I played as a kid are long dead, others grandfathers. This is my third trip back since leaving to labor in other parts, all on missions of sorrow.

Strange how little the business district of a city changes. Most of the buildings were familiar to me as were the names of the business owners they bear. But the residential district is different. I could be lost on the West Side, and the university has changed much. Looked over the two homes the family once maintained, but they made little impression. Had no desire to enter them.

All the way to Indiana and all the way back did vow that this, my first trip by bus, would be my last. Could get no plane reservations or assurance of riding space on a train, so decided to go by the big autos. Terrible.

Noted that the women travel more than men, the ratio about eight to two. And their conversation, which I could not help overhearing, dealt with either conventions or shopping. Hardly essential travel.

Decided that our farmers hereabouts must be lucky, for did see thousands of acres of corn yet uncut, largely in the Hoosier state. Saw much soybean threshing in progress, and only a small percentage of the cattle, sheep, hogs one sees hereabouts.

Received a letter from Abner Griffey inviting me "Down Under" on a fishing trip and telling about a jaunt he and some of his fellow fighters took. Landed some fish, too, and said the week-end spent on a little island somewhere in the Pacific was the most enjoyable he had spent so far in that region. Noon did attend the Ropressed by the 4-H club members and their program. Those kids really do worthwhile things, learning not only how to work, but how to play as well.

Strolled through the downtown district and was not much impressed by the midget Pumpkin Show concessions, but the exhibits are really worth while. And it is worth while to encourage our farm boys and girls in the work they are undertaking. Everyone misses the big show, and when the war is over it is likely that the first event will be the largest of all history.

Chatted with Herman Hill and Eldred Cayce, both of whom are leaving the village. They will be greatly missed, for both have been extremely active in civic affairs, shouldering heavy burdens in the common interest and doing fine jobs. Good luck to both of them in their new fields.

The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON

REAL EFFORT TO COOPERATE

WASHINGTON—The diplomatic grapevine reports that inter-Allied relations with Russia are going pretty well now. This is certainly true on the surface, and while some irritations have occurred below the surface, both sides have shown a real tendency to try to get along.

Most serious sub-surface irritation was over the Mediterranean Council, through which Russia, the United States and Britain were to confer regarding Italy, North Africa and the Balkans.

The Russians, snubbed earlier in the Summer regarding preliminary Italian armistice terms, took the Mediterranean Council seriously and appointed as their representative Andrei Vishinski, the famous prosecutor in the Russian purge trials. This was the equivalent of sending the most outstanding member of the U. S. Supreme Court or the leading lawyer of England.

Vishinski is a man of national stature, capable of making Mediterranean decisions without consulting Moscow. But to represent the United States on the Mediterranean Council, Secretary Hull sent Ed Wilson, U. S. ambassador to Panama. Wilson is a thorough-going, competent diplomat who can handle any routine job and handle it well. But almost no one outside diplomacy or Panama has heard of him. He has no national stature and he cannot act on his own.

Immediately it developed that Wilson was to act as a glorified messenger and report everything back to Washington. The British representative was to do the same. In other words, Churchill and Roosevelt were to make the decisions, and the much publicized Mediterranean Council was to be a mere reporting agency.

This immediately roused Russian wrath. They had welcomed the Council, appointed a top man. So for a moment they considered withdrawing. However, for the sake of Allied harmony, they stayed on and are giving the Mediterranean Council a trial.

POOR "PA" WATSON

Toughest job White House secretary Maj. Gen. Edwin ("Pa") Watson of the White House secretariat has to tackle each day is keeping the President's appointment schedule on time.

Frequently FDR will sit talking to an old friend for 15 or 20 minutes over the allotted time, and that snarls the White House schedule for the rest of the day.

This is hard on the general's nervous system, especially when bigwigs from the War or Navy departments are waiting to discuss military matters. On such occasions Watson is not above barging in and breaking up the conference.

The other day when the President's old friend, Gov. Bob Kerr of Oklahoma, was over-staying his time—through no fault of his own—Watson walked in and began to parade nervously about the room.

"Well, here's the undertaker, Mr. President," grinned Kerr, catching the hint. "If one of your callers gets so he doesn't move, 'Pa' will move him."

Roosevelt laughingly motioned Watson to a chair.

DIET AND HEALTH

Bachelor Longevity Vs. That of Husband

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

I HAVE THE greatest respect for the statisticians of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

but it does seem to me that at last they have gone too far and are thrusting rude hands into one of the most sacred traditions of the American scene.

They have come out with a bulletin in which they state seriously that "the bachelor runs a risk which only marriage can overcome for at every age, according to statisticians, the single man's mortality is higher than that of his married brother. And the difference is even greater when his mortality is compared to that of the widower."

Gentlemen, lay aside your pencils, adding machines and long columns of figures and allow me to make you acquainted with an aphorism that is tried and true: "A married man does not live longer than a bachelor. It only seems longer."

Inadequate Explanation I do not know where or when this observation originated, although I have consulted the various books of synonyms in my library—Stevenson's, Bartlett's and the Oxford. I will turn the question over to my friend, Mr. Henry Haskell, Editor of the Kansas City Star, who knows everything, or if he doesn't, soon finds out.

The explanation which the Metropolitan statisticians adduce seems to me weak and inadequate. The conclusions are based on the general population of the state of New York, 1939-1941, and it is said that the marked advantage of married men over bachelors persists through life, but is greatest at the ages of 30 to 44 years—the period when families are being raised. At these ages the death rates among married men are just about half those for the single.

The explanations made are that "unmarried men are more apt to take greater chances with their health and are less likely to be adequately cared for in case of illness. Marriage is a stabilizing influence in the life and health of the individual."

These seem to me extremely superficial, not to say sophomoric, conclusions. The idea that the bachelor is not cared for in case of illness shows plain lack of the facts of life. What happens to the married man when he comes home sick? Why, he is told that he was warned not to go out without his rubbers, and that there are some cold tablets on the upper shelf of the bathroom closet if Mabel didn't eat them all, and please not to complain about how he feels any more because Mr. Anthony's program is coming on the radio in five minutes.

Now contrast the bachelor. He comes home and the landlady can tell by looking at him that he is sick. He doesn't have to tell her, she knows instinctively. She takes him up and puts him to bed, and she puts a hot flannel saturated with bachelors' liniment on his chest and gets a steam kettle and gives him something to open him up, and some pills that she has been keeping on hand for just such an emergency.

No, the statisticians will have to think up some better reason why bachelors do not live longer than married men. If they do, they don't die at all. They just change into something else. Artemus Ward said: "The happy married man dies in good style at home. The old bachelor doesn't die at all. He sort of rots away, like a pollywog's tail."

"Pretty nice nose, too."

"Oh, you men," said Susan. "You make me sick."

Adam chuckled. "You look pretty when you're mad, even when you're sick, if you really are sick. But for the time being forget it, and concentrate on being Lila."

"All right, Adam, I will," Susan promised docily. "Forgive me for blowing off steam."

"Sure I forgive you. Blowing off steam is good for one—especially when she's on her way to be a heroine for a night." Adam steered the car into the street in which stood the high school building. "How are things in the cafeteria going? Must be running smoothly, since you haven't been up to see me in my office recently."

"They are running smoothly," said Susan. "Only I don't like the way that pantry woman eyes me now and then—nor the man Otto, either."

"When does he have a chance to eye you?"

"When he comes to the pantry to see the Rottler woman."

"He does that?" said Adam, surprised.

"Yes. They seem to be good friends."

"What do they talk about?"

"Nothing of any importance that I can make out. That is, when I walk in. But I always have the feeling that I've just interrupted something they were saying—something they didn't want me to hear."

Adam was thoughtful for a moment. "Well, don't let it worry you," he said presently, "that look of the pantry woman's. I'll speak to her myself tomorrow, and tell her I'd rather there would be no social calls during business hours."

"I wish you would," said Susan. "Maybe the reason she got that salt and sugar mixed was because she was thinking more about Otto than her work."

"Maybe," said Adam—but he didn't think anything of the sort. (To Be Continued)

A child born on this day may be efficient, generous, popular and lucky as well, reaching distinguished place in life.

For Sunday, October 24

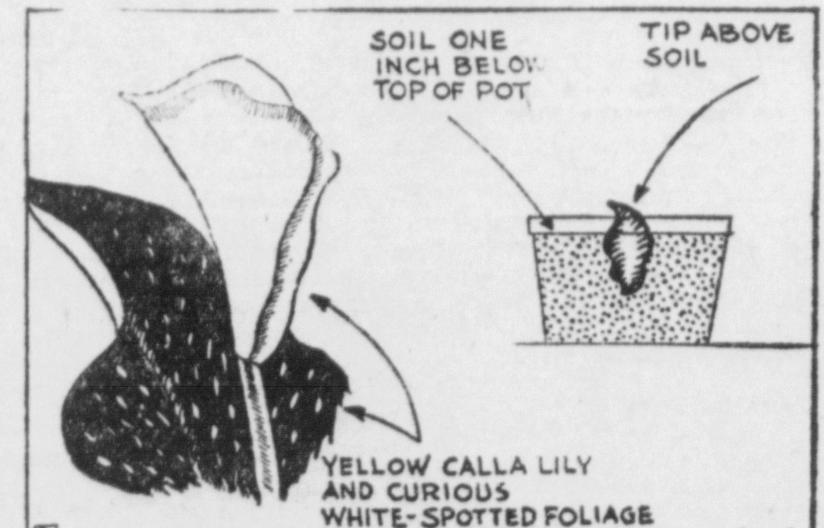

SUNDAY's horoscope holds portent of a sudden disruption, which if managed with conservatism and restraint might be turned to a successful and progressive climax. There may be unexpected change, travel and adventure, with some sort of public or community reactions. Refrain from acting under tension, excitement or commotion. The nerves may be keyed to high pitch.

Those whose birthday it is may have an exciting year, with a sudden and unforeseen uprooting of devastating experience. If this is handled with poise, calm and decisive action there might develop certain benefits. But keep taut nerves under control, and accept the adventure with equanimity and conservatism.

A child born on this day may be talented and inventive, but erratic and high strung, marring chances for success.

Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH

Potting Calla Lilies

By DEAN HALIDAY
Released by Central Press Association

THE CALLA lilies are frequently referred to as "never fails" for growing indoors. As they are natives of Egypt, they prefer an abundance of water in the fall and winter and want to be baked by the sun during the summer.

The white calla and the yellow calla with its white-spotted foliage, illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph, are both popular. One not so well known but most unusual is the pink or rose calla.

When planting calla bulbs the crown or top should be left protruding above the surface, as illustrated. Plant only one bulb in a six-inch pot or three in a nine-inch pot.

Calla bulbs require a rich soil, good drainage and plenty of water. While growing the plant is benefited by an occasional feeding of weak liquid manure water.

After potting place the bulbs in a cool, semi-dark room and water very little for several weeks. As the leaves start growth, place the pot in a light, warm room and give liberal amounts of water.

During the summer the pots may be placed on their sides, out of doors until September, when the bulbs should be repotted.

Honoring Our Parents

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL
(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for Oct. 24 is Exodus 20:12; Luke 2:48-51; Mark 7:6-13; John 19:25-27, the Golden Text being Ephesians 6:1. "Children obey your parents in the Lord: for this is right.")

THE FIFTH commandment is "Honor thy father and thy mother: that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee."

The commandments, you of course remember, were given to the Israelites before they reached their promised land. It was this land which had been promised them for a homeland that they were to live on long if they honored their fathers and their mothers. Even if one's days are not long, they are much happier and life is more worth living if we do our duty. In the case of honoring, loving and caring for our parents, it is not only our duty, but our pleasure to care for them—or it should be.

St. Luke tells us the story of the trip to Jerusalem of Jesus and His parents when He was 12 years old. It was probably the first time Jesus had been in Jerusalem since He was taken to the temple soon after He was born.

Celebrate the Passover

This visit was the occasion of the passover, when all Jews who possibly could went to the holy city, Joseph, his wife, Mary, and their Son, Jesus, with a fairly large company, had made their pilgrimage and were prepared to return home. In fact they started for home, thinking, for some reason, that although Jesus was not with them, He was somewhere in the company. After a whole day's journey toward home, they found He was not with them, and at once returned to the city to seek Him.

Three days they looked, and finally, they found Him in the temple, "sitting in the midst of the doctors, both hearing them, and asking them questions." His parents were amazed when they saw Him and His mother said, "Son, why hast Thou thus dealt with us? behold, Thy father and I have sought Thee sorrowing."

Jesus must have looked at His mother with wonder in His eyes, as He made answer: "How is it that I must about My Father's business?"

He knew, even as a boy of 12

years, that He was the Son of God and had work to do for His Father in Heaven.

Then Jesus went quietly home with His parents, and "was subject unto them." He was a quiet, obedient child, patiently biding His time until His work should begin.

And Mary, the sweet Mother, "kept all these sayings in her heart." Don't you suppose, as she went about her daily work and looked at her growing Son, that she pondered on all the events before and after His birth and wondered what they were all leading to?

Rebuking the Pharisees
It was at Capernaum that Jesus rebuked the Pharisees for hypocrisy, telling them that Isaiah prophesied of them that they honored God with their lips, "but their heart is far from Me."

He told them that they were very particular about the little customs that were a part of their ritual, but that this lip service was all they gave. They had no real love for God. Moses said they should honor their fathers and mothers, but these Pharisees declared that if parents appealed to their children for help in need, a man need only say "Corban," meaning the money is given to God, and they were not obligated to relieve their parents' wants. They were free of all responsibility.

Only John, the beloved disciple, tells the story of Jesus on His cross, while His mother stood nearby. Most of the disciples had left, being afraid, but the women who loved their Lord had been faithful, and hovered near Him to the last. Among them, as was natural, was Mary the Mother. What she suffered no word is said, but we can imagine. After the episode at Jerusalem we hear no more of Joseph, the father, and surmise that he was dead before Jesus started His mission.

Jesus looked down from His cross of suffering and saw His mother and the disciple John. To His mother He said, "Woman, behold thy Son." To John, "Behold thy mother." Thus, with almost His last words He provided for this mother of His for "from that hour that disciple took her unto his own house," and, we can add, cared for her as if she were indeed his mother, a gift from his Master.

To obey parents when we are young, and to honor and care for them when they are old, is fundamental in a civilized and Christian world.

TUXIS CLUB TO STAGE BIG HALLOWEEN PARTY

The Tuxis club will hold a Halloween Mystery Party on Friday evening, October 29, at eight o'clock. The home of Miss Donna Jean Howell will be the scene for the seasonal festivities. Invitations, headed "It's A Crime", have been sent to members telling them to "come dressed in any costume you think will put you in the mood for murder." Members may take guests, but all must go costumed. A charge of ten cents is being made to cover the cost of the party.

Honoring Our Parents

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL
(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for Oct. 24 is Exodus 20:12; Luke 2:48-51; Mark 7:6-13; John 19:25-27, the Golden Text being Ephesians 6:1, "Children obey your parents in the Lord: for this is right.")

THE FIFTH commandment is "Honor thy father and thy mother: that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee."

The commandments, you of course remember, were given to the Israelites before they reached their promised land. It was this land which had been promised them for a homeland that they were to live on long if they honored their fathers and their mothers. Even if one's days are not long, they are much happier and life is more worth living if we do our duty. In the case of honoring, loving and caring for our parents, it is not only our duty, but our pleasure to care for them—or it should be.

St. Luke tells us the story of the trip to Jerusalem of Jesus and His parents when He was 12 years old. It was probably the first time Jesus had been in Jerusalem since He was taken to the temple soon after He was born.

Celebrate the Passover
This visit was the occasion of the Passover, when all Jews who possibly could went to the holy city, Jerusalem. His wife, Mary, and His son, Jesus, with a fairly large company, had made their pilgrimage and were prepared to return home. In fact, they started for home, thinking, for some reason, that although Jesus was not with them, He was somewhere in the company. After a whole day's journey toward home, they found He was not with them, and at once returned to the city to seek Him.

Three days they looked, and finally, they found Him in the temple, "sitting in the midst of the doctors, both hearing them, and asking them questions."

His parents were amazed when they saw Him and His mother said, "Son, why hast Thou thus dealt with us? behold, Thy father and I have sought Thee sorrowing."

Jesus must have looked at His mother with wonder in His eyes, as He answered: "How is it that ye sought Me? wist ye not that I must be about My Father's business?"

He knew, even as a boy of 12

years, that He was the Son of God and had work to do for His Father in Heaven.

Then Jesus went quietly home with His parents, and "was subject unto them." He was a quiet, obedient child, patiently biding His time until His work should begin.

And Mary, the sweet Mother, "kept all these sayings in her heart." Don't you suppose, as she went about her daily work and looked at her growing Son, that she pondered on all the events before and after His birth and wondered what they were all leading to?

Rebuking the Pharisees
It was at Capernaum that Jesus rebuked the Pharisees for hypocrisy, telling them that Isaiah prophesied of them that they honored God with their lips, "but their heart is far from Me."

He told them that they were very particular about the little customs that were a part of their ritual, but that this lip service was all they gave. They had no real love for God. Moses said they should honor their fathers and mothers, but these Pharisees declared that if parents appealed to their children for help in need, a man need only say "Corban," meaning the money is given to God, and they were not obligated to relieve their parents' wants. They were free of all responsibility.

Only John, the beloved disciple, tells the story of Jesus on His cross, while His mother stood nearby. While the disciples had left, being afraid, but the women faithful and hovered near Him to the last. Among them, as was natural, was Mary the Mother. What she suffered no word is said, but we can imagine. After the episode at Jerusalem we hear no more of Joseph, the father, and surmise that he was dead before Jesus started His mission.

Jesus looked down from His cross of suffering and saw His mother and the disciple John. To His mother He said, "Woman, behold thy Son." To John, "Behold thy mother." Thus, with almost His last words He provided for this mother of His for "from that hour that disciple took her unto his own house," and, we can add, cared for her as if she were indeed his mother, a gift from His Master.

To obey parents when we are young, and to honor and care for them when they are old, is fundamental in a civilized and Christian world.

ARMY BIG FAVORITE

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 23—A powerhouse Army grid squad which had run up 172 points in being unbeaten, untied and unscored on in four games fared off against Yale at the latter's bowl today.

Yale, riddled by injuries and half-crippled by the loss of Capt. Tim Hoopes, had little to present in meeting the West Point steamroller.

Glenn Davis, the sensational 19-year-old Californian, by Coach Howard Odell's own admission, Yale went into the game undermanned and unprepared.

A new-aerial educational program which has been launched by Peru's minister of education, will benefit that country's more than 4,000,000 Indians, who compose almost 60 percent of the country's total population.

Red and Black Loses 18-0 To Wilmington In Bitter Struggle; Passes Do It

Circleville high Tigers saw their hopes of a South Central Ohio football league championship blasted by a powerful Wilmington Hurricane, 18 to 0, Friday night at Wilmington, but even worse lost the services of two first string players, Bobby Grubb and Dave Mader, for the remainder of the season. Grubb has a broken collarbone and Mader's right wrist was fractured, the latter's injury coming on the final play of the game. Grubb was hurt in the third period.

By winning from the Red and Black the Hurricane gained the South Central title since the team has won from all four league opponents. The Tigers, victors over Hillsboro and losers to Wilmington, still have a chance for second place if they can whip Greenfield and Washington C. H. Greenfield comes here next Thursday. That the local team's work will be cut out is shown by the fact that McClain held Wilmington to a 13 to 6 score.

RICKEY TO NAME DODGER'S FIELD MANAGER TODAY

NEW YORK, Oct. 23 — Branch Rickey has indicated that on Monday afternoon he will advise the borough of Flatbush and the world in general whether Leo Durocher is to remain in office as manager . . . the wagering is even money that Leo will be back again, despite reports that Bill Terry has reached an agreement on the job . . . Rickey and Durocher came out of a preliminary conference yesterday with nothing to reveal on the subject.

No, they didn't snub anybody and refuse to enter conversation on any topic whatever, for they are two of the talkiest men in baseball . . . the Dodger president won't say anything in 10 words, if it can be stretched into a full chapter with appropriate pauses, grimaces and eyebrow-wiggling . . . Durocher can't wait a minute to begin voicing his views even when he knows the next word is going to get him banished from a ball game . . . those who have listened to these two gentlemen at odd times often wonder how they ever reach an agreement . . . and they never do in one sitting . . . they always have to meet a second time to figure out what each said in the first place.

The first score of the game was set to stop Scott, the secondary was left wide open for passes, and there is where Wilmington made life miserable for the Red and Black. The Tiger defense was never changed during the game although Wilmington changed its offensive tactics as soon as it saw the Red and Black line was too strong to dent.

Wide sweeps, featuring Baugh and Hamilton, and passes, mostly from Baugh to Daniel, proved the undoing of the Tigers.

First on Reverse
The first score of the game came with only one minute to play in the second quarter after a pass had moved the ball to the five yard line. The Tiger line smeared a Hurricane ball totter for a five yard loss on the next play, but, on the second scrimmage, Chick Hamilton, on his antiquated reverse, ran the Circleville end without a hand being put on him for the goal.

Wilmington scored again in the third quarter on a long pass to Daniel that caught the Tiger secondary out of position. The pass was good for a total of 43 yards.

The final tally came on another neat toss, Copeland to Daniel, from the 15 yard line. Again the Tiger secondary was caught off balance.

SPENDING FIGHT

The drive to pare federal expenditures has reached crusading dimensions on Capitol Hill since the five Senate globe-trotters returned from the battle fronts with some disquieting tales about lend-lease largesse.

However, when the matter was discussed behind closed doors by the Senate Appropriations Committee, there were repercussions more like a riot than a crusade.

Septuagenarian Senators Kenneth McKellar, Tennessee Democrat, and Clyde M. Reed, Kansas Republican, tangled in a bare-knuckled argument over how much money the committee should spend for "experts" to study war and domestic spending.

McKellar said $30,000 was enough and was all set to put a vote a motion calling for this amount when Reed demanded a chance to be heard. The forthright Kansas newspaper publisher contended that $30,000 was only a "flybite," that at least $300,000 was needed to do a thorough job of investigating "Administration extravagance."

"You're tackling something with a tack-hammer that ought to be hit with a sledge-hammer," Reed argued, waving his finger at the Senator from Tennessee.

When McKellar, who was presiding in the absence of Chairman Carter Glass, started to reply, the Gentleman from Kansas cut him short. With a gesture embracing all Democrats on the opposite side of the table, Reed exploded: "I'm fed up with the attitude of this committee when it comes to protecting the taxpayers' interest. You're all wet."

"I won't have you casting reflections on this committee," erupted McKellar, who is almost as anti-New Deal as Reed, though he still flies the Democratic label. The Tennesseean added a few colorful after-thoughts which caused Reed to rush up to the table, demanding an apology. After a glaring bout, the two Senators were finally placated by colleagues.

Griffith Chosen To Arrange for Premiere Of "This Is The Army"

"This Is The Army", Irving Berlin's famous all-soldier musical motion picture, will be shown at the Grand theatre in Circleville November 9 with all proceeds of the premiere showing to go to the Army Emergency Relief fund.

At the request of Army officials, a citizens' committee headed by George C. Griffith is being formed to sponsor the local premiere. This committee will endeavor to sell tickets at premium prices for the first showing of the picture here.

Plans for the premiere will be discussed at a luncheon meeting at Pickaway Arms Tuesday at noon. Mr. Griffith is forming a committee of civic and club leaders to assist in the program.

Lieutenant Guy O. Lansdale, stationed at Fort Hayes, was in Circleville Friday working with Mr. Griffith in the formation of his committee. He said that an Army official will attend the luncheon to assist in making plans for the premiere.

Produced with the full collaboration of the Army, "This Is The Army" presents Irving Berlin and the original company of 350 soldiers who performed in the musical for three months on Broadway and toured the nation last Winter making $2,000,000 for Army Emergency Relief.

Several Hollywood personalities have been added to the picture. Among them are George Murphy, Joan Leslie, Lieutenant Ronald Regan, Kate Smith, George Tobias, Alan Hale, Francis Langford and others.

Appointment of Mr. Griffith as chairman of the Circleville committee was made by Lt. Col. Spotswood W. Duke of Columbus, who is in charge of Army Emergency Relief for the Fifth Service Command.

ing in the absence of Chairman
Carter Glass, started to reply, the Gentleman from Kansas cut him short. With a gesture embracing all Democrats on the opposite side of the table, Reed exploded:

"I'm fed up with the attitude of this committee when it comes to protecting the taxpayers' interest.
You're all wet."
"I won't have you casting reflections on this committee," erupted McKellar, who is almost as anti-New Deal as Reed, though he still files the Democratic label.
The Tennessee added a few colorful after-thoughts which caused Reed to rush up to the table, demanding an apology. After a glaring bout, the two Senators were finally placated by colleagues.

Griffith Chosen To Arrange for Premiere Of "This Is The Army"

"This Is the Army", Irving Berlin's famous all-soldier musical motion picture, will be shown at the Grand theatre in Circleville November 9 with all proceeds of the premiere showing to go to the Army Emergency Relief fund.

At the request of Army officials, a citizens' committee headed by George C. Griffith is being formed to sponsor the local premiere. This committee will endeavor to sell tickets at premium prices for the first showing of the picture here.

Plans for the premiere will be discussed at a luncheon meeting at Pickaway Arms Tuesday at noon. Mr. Griffith is forming a committee of civic and club leaders to assist in the program.

Lieutenant Guy O. Lansdale, stationed at Fort Hayes, was in Circleville Friday working with Mr. Griffith in the formation of his committee. He said that an Army official will attend the luncheon to assist in making plans for the premiere.

Produced with the full collaboration of the Army, "This Is the Army" presents Irving Berlin and the original company of 350 soldiers who performed in the musical for three months on Broadway and toured the nation last Winter making $2,000,000 for Army
Emergency Relief.

Several Hollywood personalities have been added to the picture.
Among them are George Murphy,
Joan Leslie, Lieutenant Ronald
Regan, Kate Smith, George Tobias, Alan Hale, Francis Langford and others.

Appointment of Mr. Griffith as chairman of the Circleville committee was made by Lt. Col.
Spotswood W. Duke of Columbus, who is in charge of Army Em-
